About Zellige Tiles

Zellige Tile is a time-tested art form that features rich colouration, intricate textures, and complete distinctiveness.

When it comes to decorating your home, nothing is more challenging than creating a classic look all your own. Crafting your unique style of home decor is difficult enough, but creating a space that features that elusive timeless quality is incredibly challenging, especially when the pace of design trend shifts is taken into account. This is where tradition tends to shine, where classic decor like Zellige tiles stands out. Zellige tiles are traditionally handcrafted with non-refined natural clay extracted from the Fez region in Morocco. The clay is kneaded with water, moulded by hand, dried naturally and fired in a kiln. Glass enamel is then applied to the surface of the raw tile called “biscuit”, in multiple semi-transparent shades creating a pearlescent, metallic, volcanic or opaque finish. The enamel is melted and vitrified during further firing in a kiln.

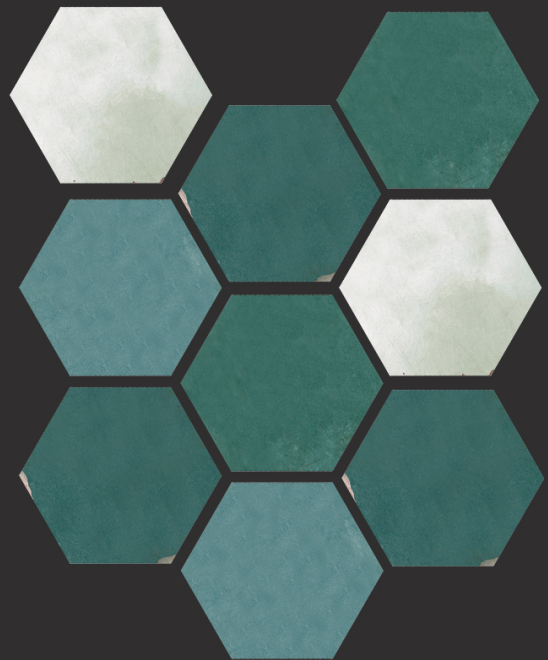

The final step of Zellige production involves cutting the enamelled pieces into an endless collection of tile shapes and sizes. Zellige, also known as Zilij or Zelij, is characterised by variations of tone, shine, flatness, transparency and depth of the glazing as well as a surface texture with irregularities. Each Zellige tile is unique. DaVinci Ceramics based in Morbi, has gathered a team of over a hundred specialised craftsmen – known as Mellems – to manufacture Zellige tiles and compositions according to clients’ designs and projects.
